English Version

Trauma Recovery Network serves victims (and their families) of the following crimes:

- Physical Assault (shot, stabbed or hit)
- Sexual Assault
- Human Trafficking
- Elder Abuse or Neglect
- Child Abuse or Neglect
- Domestic and/or Family Violence
- Family members of Homicide Victims

For many victims of crime, problems can last long after the physical wounds have healed. Crime victims can suffer fear and shock during the traumatic event, followed by problems with concentration, sleep, and feelings like anger, anxiety, depression, isolation or helplessness. These responses can also occur in family members of victims. Survivors of long-term, repeated victimization, including abused children and women, may develop mental health problems that would benefit from support.

While not all crime victims need additional support to deal with the aftermath of victimization, there are many violent crime victims who can benefit from specialized services to help them with the healing process. All Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) services are free for victims and their families.

Mental health providers include Licensed Clinical Social Workers, Psychiatrists, Psychologists, Mental Health Counselors, and Marriage & Family Therapists. For many victims, the support, understanding, and counseling provided by Peer Specialists can also be extremely helpful.

Thriving Mind South Florida Trauma Recovery Network

After experiencing a traumatic event such as physical assault, sexual abuse, domestic violence, or gun violence, crime victims often receive medical care for their physical injuries at the hospital. However, many victims also experience problems and distress related to their trauma.

Thriving Mind South Florida's Trauma Recovery Network offers a number of free services for adult and child victims of violent crime. Family members of victims can also receive services at no cost. All services are free to victims and their families thanks in part to a Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) grant from the Florida Attorney General's Office. The VOCA Fund was created by Congress in 1984 to provide federal support to state and local community-based programs to serve victims of crime.
